- Product information obtained from Carry Goods must be passed on by the provider to its subcontractors in the production chain.
- The provider must keep all product information, orders, delivery notes, certificates, material analysis results, etc. for a minimum of 10 years. Upon request, the supplier must be able to provide the information in question to the customer, i.e. Carry Goods Ltd., promptly and at the latest within 3 days of Carry Goods forwarding the request. In the event that the supplier cannot meet the above requirement and maintain the information for the defined period of time, he must inform the customer (Carry Goods Ltd.) immediately. After the expiration of the archiving period, the supplier is obliged to destroy all information unambiguously. This is valid throughout the supply chain.
- The provider must allow and ensure the right of access of a representative of Carry Goods Ltd., including the customer and the relevant government authority, to the production premises, at each level of the supply chain, and to all related records.
- The agreed dates and deadlines are binding. The arrival of the goods at the customer is decisive for the observance of the delivery deadlines, if no other written agreement has been made. The purchaser must be informed immediately if circumstances arise or if it becomes apparent that the delivery period cannot be met.
- When parts are dispatched from the supplier, the delivery note including the declaration of conformity must be attached

By accepting the order, the provider agrees to the above without reservation.
